Scene Change Detection

Detect Scene Changes

“ffmpeg -nostats -threads 2 -i INPUTVIDEO.ts -
max_muxing_queue_size 999 -filter:v
'select=gt(scene\,0.18),showinfo' -f null - 2>&1 | grep
Parsed_showinfo_1”

Extract Images at those Scene Changes

“ffmpeg -loglevel panic -y -threads 2 -ss SECS -i
INPUTVIDEO.ts -vframes 1 -q:v 1 -vf yadif
THUMBNAIL.jpg”

Then post image to Watson Visual Recognition for Classification (Tennis, Replay or Negative):

curl --max-time 40 -sS -X POST -u "apikey:YOURAPIKEY"
-F "images_file=@THUMBNAIL.jpg" -F "threshold=0.6" -
F "classifier_ids=YOURCLASSIFIERNAME"

Acoustic Adjustments to Tighten Scene Clipping

- IBM Maximo PQI Acoustic Insights.
 - Primarily used to monitor the sounds of machinery in factories.
- For this project, trained on common tennis sounds:
 - Ball Strike
 - Shoe squeak on court
 - Applause
 - Chair Umpire
 - Ball Bounce
- Docker container running on IBM Cloud.
- Audio extracted from video and posted to API.
- Single JSON response with sound classifications and timing.
- Non-tennis content removed from clip.

Notable Scenes

OK, but there were 182 points in that match, which ones were notable enough to put into a highlight reel?

Sound of the Crowd

You know, crowd noise. Not sound level but actual crowd noise.

Player Gestures

Visible analysis of end of the scene to determine if players are celebrating.

Tennis Analytics

Point quality ranking based on traditional tennis stats such as Break Points and Winners.
